Subject : Proposal for a Council Framework Decision on preventing and combating trafficking in human beings, and protecting victims, repealing Framework Decision 2002/629/JHA

On 23 October 2009, the Council (Justice and Home Affairs (JHA)) noted the state of play of the proposal for a Council Framework Decision on preventing and combating trafficking in human beings, and protecting victims, and solved the issues that were raised.

DK, DE, IE, FR, SI, NL, SE and UK have a parliamentary scrutiny reservation on the proposal. The few reservations remaining on specific Articles and/or paragraphs can be found in the footnotes in the text in the Annex.

With a view to reaching a general approach at the Justice and Home Affairs Council on 30 November/1 December 2009, the JHA Counsellors will be requested to examine these last outstanding issues in due course.

THE COUNCIL OF THE EUROPEAN UNION,

Having regard to the Treaty on European Union, and in particular Article 29, Article 31(1)(e) and Article 34(2)(b) thereof,

Having regard to the proposal from the Commission,

Having regard to the opinion of the European Parliament,¹

Whereas:

(1) Trafficking in human beings is a serious crime, often committed in the Framework of organised crime, and a gross violation of human rights.

(2) The European Union is committed to the prevention of and fight against trafficking in human beings, and to the protection of the rights of trafficked persons. For this purpose, Council Framework Decision 2002/629/JHA of 19 July 2002 on combating trafficking in human beings,² and an EU Plan on best practices, standards and procedures for combating and preventing trafficking in human beings (2005/C 311/01)³ were adopted.

(3) This Framework Decision adopts an integrated and holistic approach to the fight against trafficking in human beings. More rigorous prevention, [...] prosecution and protection of victims' rights, are major objectives of this Framework Decision. Children are more vulnerable and therefore at greater risk of falling victim to trafficking in human beings. All the provisions of this Framework Decision should be applied in the light of the best interests of the child, in accordance with the 1989 United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.⁴

⁴ United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, adopted and opened for signature, ratification and accession by General Assembly resolution 44/25 of 20 November 1989.

(4) The 2000 United Nations Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, especially Women and Children supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organised Crime¹ and the 2005 Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings² are crucial steps in the process of enhancing international cooperation against trafficking in human beings.

(5) In order to meet recent developments in the phenomenon of trafficking in human beings, this Framework Decision adopts a broader concept of what should be considered trafficking in human beings than the Framework Decision 2002/629/JHA and therefore includes additional forms of exploitation.

Within the context of this Framework Decision, forced begging should be understood as a form of forced labour or service as defined in the ILO Convention n. 29 concerning Forced or Compulsory Labour of 29 June 1930. Therefore, exploitation of begging falls within the scope of the definition of trafficking in human beings only when all the elements of forced labour or services occur. In the light of the relevant case-law, the validity of the eventual consent to perform such a service should be evaluated case by case. However, when a child is concerned, the eventual consent should never be considered valid.

The term “exploitation of criminal activities” should be understood as exploitation of a person to commit, inter alia, pick-pocketing, shop-lifting and other similar activities which are subject to penalties and imply financial gain.

The definition also covers trafficking in human beings for the purpose of the removal of organs, which can be linked with organ trafficking and constitutes a serious violation of human dignity and physical integrity.

² Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings, made in Warsaw, 16.V.2005, Council of Europe Treaty Series N. 197.

(6) The levels of penalties in this Framework Decision reflect the growing concern among Member States regarding the development in the phenomenon of trafficking in human beings. Considering the gravity of the crime, penalties should therefore be effective, dissuasive and proportionate. When, under this Framework decision, a reference is made to surrender, such reference should be interpreted in accordance with the Council Framework Decision 2002/584/JHA of 13 June 2002 on the European arrest warrant and the surrender procedures between Member States. When the offence is particularly grave, for example when the life of the victim has been endangered or the offence has involved serious violence or been committed against a particularly vulnerable victim, such as a child, this should be reflected in more severe penalties.

(7) Victims of trafficking in human beings should, in accordance with the basic principles of the legal systems of the relevant Member States, be protected from prosecution or punishment for criminal activities such as the use of false documents, or offences envisaged in legislation related to prostitution or immigration, that they have been compelled to commit as a direct consequence of being subject to trafficking. The aim of such protection is to safeguard the human rights of victims, to avoid further victimisation and to encourage them to act as witnesses in criminal proceedings against the perpetrators. This safeguard does not exclude prosecution or punishment for offences that a person has wilfully committed or participated in.

(8) To ensure successful investigations and prosecutions of offences of trafficking in human beings, investigative tools which are used in organised crime or other serious crime cases and that may include interception of communications, covert surveillance including electronic surveillance, monitoring of bank accounts or other financial investigations, should be made available to those responsible for the investigating and prosecution of such offences.

(9) While Directive 2004/81/EC¹ provides for the issue of a resident permit to victims of trafficking in human beings who are third-country nationals, and Directive 2004/38/EC² regulates the exercise of the right to move and reside freely in the territory of Member States by citizens of the Union and their families, including protection from expulsion, this Framework Decision establishes specific protective measures for any victim of trafficking in human beings.

Consequently, this Framework Decision does not deal with the conditions of their residence in the territory of Member States or any other issue falling within the Community competence.

(10) Victims of trafficking in human beings need to be able to exercise their rights effectively. Therefore assistance and support should be available to victims before, during and for an appropriate time after criminal proceedings. The assistance and support provided should include at least a minimum set of measures that are necessary to enable the victim to recover and escape from their traffickers. The practical implementation of such measures should, on the basis of an individual assessment carried out in accordance with national procedures, take into account the conditions and needs of the person concerned.

A person should be provided with assistance and support as soon as there is a reasonable grounds indication that he/she might have been trafficked and irrespective of his/her willingness to act as a witness.

Assistance should be provided unconditionally until the competent authorities have taken a final decision with regard to the reflection period and the residence permit, or otherwise acknowledge that the person is a victim of trafficking in human beings. If, after the completion of the identification process or the expiration of the reflection period, the person is not considered eligible for a residence permit or does not otherwise have lawful residence in the country, the Member State concerned is not obliged to continue providing assistance and support to that person on the basis of this Framework Decision.

Where necessary, considering circumstances such as that medical treatment is ongoing due to severe physical or psychological consequences of the crime, or that the safety of the victim is at risk due to his/her statements in criminal proceedings, assistance and support should continue for an appropriate period after the criminal proceedings.

(11) The Council Framework Decision of 15 March 2001 on the standing of victims in criminal proceedings (2001/220/JHA) establishes a set of victims' rights in criminal proceedings, including the right to protection and compensation.

In addition victims of trafficking in human beings should be given access to legal counselling and to legal representation, including for the purpose of claiming compensation. The purpose of legal counselling is to enable victims to be informed and receive advice about the various possibilities open to them. Legal counselling and legal representation should be provided free of charge at least when the victim does not have sufficient financial resources in a way which is consistent with internal procedures of Member States. As child victims in particular are unlikely to have such resources, legal counselling and legal representation would in practice be free of charge to them. Furthermore, on the basis of an individual risk assessment, carried out in accordance with national procedures, victims should be protected from retaliation, from intimidation, and from the risk of being re-trafficked.

(12) Victims of trafficking in human beings, who bear the consequences of the abuse and degrading treatment, such as sexual exploitation, rape, slavery-like practices or the removal of organs, which is commonly related to the trafficking crime, should be protected from secondary victimisation and further trauma during the criminal proceedings. To this end victims of trafficking in human beings should receive appropriate treatment, based on the individual needs of each victim, during criminal investigations and proceedings. The individual needs assessment should take into consideration circumstances such as age, pregnancy, health, disability or other personal conditions, as well as the physical and psychological consequences of the criminal activity to which the victim has been subjected. Whether and how the treatment is applied is to be decided in accordance with grounds defined by national legislation, rules of judicial discretion, practice and guidance, on a case by case basis.

(13) In addition to measures available to all victims of trafficking in human beings, each Member State should ensure that specific assistance, support and protection measures are available to child victims. These measures should be provided in the best interests of the child and in accordance with the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child.

Where the age of a person subject to trafficking in human beings is uncertain, and there are reasons to believe he/she is below the age of 18 years, that person should be presumed to be a child and receive immediate assistance, support and protection.

Assistance and support measures to child victims should aim at their physical and psycho-social recovery and at a durable solution for the person in question.

Considering that child victims of trafficking in human beings are particularly vulnerable, additional protective measures should be available to protect the child during interviews in the course of criminal investigations and proceedings.

(14) Each Member State should establish and/or strengthen policies to prevent trafficking in human beings including measures to discourage the demand that fosters all forms of exploitation by means of research, information, awareness raising, and education. In such initiatives each Member State should adopt a gender perspective and a child rights approach.

(15) Directive 2009/52/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 18 June 2009 providing for minimum standards on sanctions against employers of illegally staying third-country nationals¹ provides for penalties for employers of illegally staying third-country nationals who, while not having been charged with or convicted of trafficking in human beings, use work or services exacted from a person with the knowledge that he/she is a victim of such trafficking. In addition to that, Member States should take into consideration the possibility of imposing sanctions on the users of any service exacted from a victim, with the knowledge that he/she has been trafficked. This further criminalisation could include employers of legally staying third-country nationals and EU nationals, as well as buyers of sexual services from any trafficked person, irrespective of their nationality.

(16) National monitoring systems such as National Rapporteurs or equivalent mechanisms should be established by the Member States, in the way they consider appropriate according to their internal organisation, and taking into account the need for a minimum structure with identified tasks, in order to carry out assessments on trafficking in human beings trends, measure the results of anti-trafficking actions, and regularly report to the relevant national authorities.

(17) Since the objective of this Framework Decision, namely to fight against trafficking in human beings, cannot be sufficiently achieved by the Member States alone and can therefore, by reasons of the scale and effects be better achieved at Union level, the Union may adopt measures, in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity as referred to Article 2 of the Treaty on European Union and as set out in Article 5 of the Treaty establishing the European Community. In accordance with the principle of proportionality, as set out in the latter Article, this Framework Decision does not go beyond what is necessary to achieve that objective.

(18) This Framework Decision respects fundamental rights and observes the principles recognised in particular by the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union and notably human dignity, prohibition of slavery, forced labour and trafficking in human beings, prohibition of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, the rights of the child, the right to liberty and security, freedom of expression and information, protection of personal data, the right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial and the principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties. In particular, this Framework Decision seeks to ensure full respect for these rights and principles.
