Parties shall consider taking the necessary legislative and other measures, in accordance with their domestic law, to grant persons who have sufficient interest or allege a violation of a right, as well as non-governmental organisations promoting environmental protection, the right to participate in criminal proceedings concerning offences established in accordance with this Convention, to the extent that said procedural rights for such persons and organisations exist in the Parties' domestic legal systems in proceedings for other criminal offences, for example as a civil party.

Article 41 – Information

- 1. A Party may, within the limits of its internal law, without prior request, forward to another Party information obtained within the framework of its own investigations when it considers that the disclosure of such information might assist the receiving Party in preventing offences established in accordance with this Convention or in initiating or carrying out investigations or proceedings concerning such offences, or that this disclosure might lead to a request for co-operation by that Party under Article 40 of this Convention.

 3. Parties shall ensure that victims have access to legal aid where they have the status of parties to criminal proceedings. The conditions or procedural rules under which victims have access to legal aid shall be determined by domestic law.
 4. Parties shall take the necessary legislative and other measures to ensure that victims of an offence established in accordance with this Convention committed in the territory of a Party other than the one where they reside can make a complaint before the competent authorities of their State of residence if they are unable to do so in the Party where the criminal offence was committed or, in the case of a serious offence within the meaning of the domestic law of that Party, where they do not wish to do so.
